

Info Sheet: Declaring Racism a Public Health Crisis

The goal: Compel Governor Ned Lamont to publically address racism a public health crisis in the state of Connecticut by:

1. Declaring racism a public health crisis
2. Establishing a racial and economic justice agenda
3. Creating an advisory team*
4. Committing to prioritize this work in the 2021 legislative session

Why? Due to race-based denied opportunities and discrimination in housing, employment, education, food, health care, law and civil rights, health outcomes for Black and Hispanic people are much bleaker than their White counterparts. For example, nationwide, Black people are dying of COVID-19 at 2.3 times the rate of white people according to the COVID Racial Data Tracker.

To declare racism as a public health crisis is an important first step in the movement to advance racial equity and justice according to the American Public Health Association. It also sets the ground for subsequent allocation of resources and strategic action.

How? On June 15, 2020, Rev. AJ Johnson, pastor of Urban Hope Refuge Church, sent an 11 page document to Governor Lamont urging him to take swift action to address racism as a public health crisis by taking the four action steps outlined above.

Contributors included professionals from the YWCA Hartford Region, Open Communities Alliance, Connecticut Women's Education and Legal Fund, Yale Law School, Black Leaders and Administrators Consortium, Inc. and more.

To date, there has been no response from the Governor.

To truly act on the steps outlined above, we propose reconstituting the Connecticut African American Affairs Commission. It has been folded into other commissions and is currently a part of the Commission on Women, Children, Seniors, Equity and Opportunity. The sum total of this collapse of children, seniors, and persons of color into one catch-all body gets at the heart of the de-prioritization at the core of the call to urgently act on racism.*

Has this been done before? Yes! Local and state leaders have declared racism a public health crisis/emergency in over 20 states. In Connecticut, 16 cities/counties have made the declaration. Click here to learn more.

Info Sheet: Passing Clean Slate Legislation

The goal: To get legislators to pass “Clean Slate” legislation in partnership with Congregations Organized for a New Connecticut (CONNECT).

What can you do? Participate in GHIAA’s Virtual Public Action, November 12, 2020 @ 7:00pm. Join with hundreds of others in urging our legislators to pass clean slate legislation. Register here, or email ghiaa@cljct.org to connect with an organizer.

Why? Clean Slate legislation would empower Connecticut to expunge qualifying criminal records for people who remain crime-free for three years for most misdemeanors and five years for low-level felonies. Clean Slate helps people get the second chance they’ve earned by streamlining petition-based record-clearing — a costly and time-sensitive process that prevents the vast majority of eligible people from ever obtaining needed relief.

Nearly 9 in 10 employers, 4 in 5 landlords, and 3 in 5 colleges now use background checks, denying formerly incarcerated people the opportunity to support themselves and their families.

Clean Slate impacts approximately 5,000 Connecticut residents who complete their prison sentences and are released from prison each year. Too often, their criminal records is a barrier to moving forward with their lives.

Click here to see a Fact Sheet put together by CONNECT showing how Clean Slate is not only a racial justice issue, but also improves public safety and boosts the economy!

How? GHIAA is collaborating with CONNECT and others to prepare legislation for the next legislative session in January 2021.

Has this been done before? Yes! At the state level, Pennsylvania, Utah, California and now Michigan have all passed Clean Slate legislation with wide bi-partisan support.

A 2019 Michigan study found that citizens who had their records expunged saw a 25% increase in salary after just two years! Those salaries, earned on the legal marketplace, mean that they can secure basic goods, support their families, and contribute tax dollars to society.

If not for mass incarceration and the collateral consequences of a criminal record, the U.S. poverty rate could have dropped a full 20% between 1980 and 2004.

Info Sheet: Repealing Welfare Liens in Connecticut

The goal: To compel legislators to repeal welfare liens in the State of Connecticut.

What can you do? Participate in GHIAA's Virtual Public Action, November 12, 2020 @ 7:00pm. Join with hundreds of others in compelling our legislatures to repeal welfare liens in Connecticut. Register here, or email ghiaa@cljct.org to connect with an organizer.

Why? Connecticut is one of only two states that continue to practice welfare liens. A welfare lien is a lien that the state places on a welfare recipient's assets, demanding repayment when the person sells or refinances a home, receives a legal settlement (e.g. for personal injury), receives any inheritance, or dies and attempts to leave inheritance to their heirs.

These liens treat welfare assistance as a loan saddled on the backs of recipients. These loans essentially keep recipients and their families trapped in cycles of debt and poverty.

How? GHIAA leaders and organizers worked with Rep. Matt Ritter, House Majority Leader, on a draft Bill CTHB05310 to repeal Connecticut's current statute and end this horrific practice that keeps families in entrenched poverty.

backs of the most impoverished amongst us! This is morally and ethically reprehensible.

Has this been done before? Yes! A 1973 national study noted that over 30 states had this kind of provision in their law at that time. The study concluded (almost 50 years ago!) that the policy was outmoded. It stated: "As the Nixon administration has recommended, Congress should prohibit all recovery in the federally funded cash assistance programs; the states also should repeal the requirement in General Assistance."

Our state can and MUST do better to give its residents who receive welfare assistance a true opportunity to make their way out of poverty and off assistance altogether.
