2nd Planting

Racial Justice Activation Teams

Join multi-racial, multi-ethnic, and multi-faith leadership teams from GHIAA congregations for a 9-month journey of education, agitation, and action-planning. With opportunities for virtual, independent, and in-person learning, teams will develop the will and skill needed to identify and work towards individual and congregational racial justice goals.

Cohort will run: May 2022 - Jan 2023 with summer & winter breaks

Our facilitators on this journey:

Shae Washington (she/her) is a trainer, facilitator, and consultant with 15+ years of experience guiding groups with care through issues of systemic power and oppression. Shae believes that authentic love recognizes the image of God in every person and breaks down systemic and individual barriers to freedom.

Jason Fredlund (he/him) is an educator, facilitator, and coach on issues of race, identity, power, white supremacy, justice, and liberation. His background in experiential education, theology, interfaith dialogue, and transformative leadership inform his approach to individual and community transformation.

Congregations will apply/participate in teams of 5-8 and plan to contribute significant time, talent, and treasure to this transformative cohort experience.

“This experience gave me a framework for understanding my racial identity, how this identity connects with my faith, and provided the tools to continue to move forward in antiracism work both personally and within my congregation.” ~ 2021 RJAT Participant
